

So Far chronicles Joyce McDonald Browns life from her birth in Kisbey, Saskatchewan during the Great Depression through her school days in Abbotsford, BC, during WWII. From jelly pads to computers, the book describes Joyces teaching career which spanned the past six decades. She shares experiences she had in schools in Langley, Shearwater, Ocean Falls, Bella Coola, Sooke School District, and in the oil sands city of Fort McMurray, Alberta. So Far tells all about raising chickens in the Fraser Valley, living on an isolated island near Bella Bella, and on a houseboat in Namu. Joyce shares intimate details of the life she shared with her husband Ted, and their seven children. Their family life together was always busy, but never dull.
